SAFETY 22 WITH NIC PATEE

BY WRNW

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF SAFETY PROFESSIONALS

Nic Patee, PT, CEO, Work Right NW

The American Society of Safety Professionals Annual Conference - Safety 22 - is less than a month away! Work Right is excited to take part again in this annual event that networks like-minded professionals on the latest challenges, opportunities, and innovations in the industry. This week we sat down with one of the presenters we happen to know - Work Right's own, Nic Patee, to learn more about his role in the conference.

Work Right NW is changing the way that companies view workplace hazards. Our focus is on educating the workforce to prevent injury. We provide access to Injury Prevention Specialist's in the workplace to address the early signs of discomfort. We are changing the industry one company at a time by helping one person at a time.

The Industrial Athlete's Daily Checklist for Injury Prevention

WR: What are you speaking about this year at the conference?

NP: Chantel Gorton and I are co-presenting "The Industrial Athlete's Daily Checklist for Injury Prevention." We'll present a checklist that encompasses wellness, ergonomics, and hazards to empower prevention, ensure adherence to safety and apply best practices.

WR: Can you give us a sneak peek at a best practice at injury prevention?

NP: "Measure what matters," as John Dohr famously states. It is no different with musculoskeletal injury prevention. Strategically work to implement metrics that can cross barriers between your front line operational leaders and your EHS professionals. This will allow us to operationalize prevention strategies more quickly.

WR: What do you hope to accomplish with your involvement at Safety 22?

NP: Our mission is to normalize injury prevention. My desire for this conference is to empower others to share that vision.
